THE LADY PARTS JUSTICE LEAGUE STAND-UP COMEDY NIGHT at Smack Mellon (July 27, 8 p.m.). In 2015 Lizz Winstead, the co-creator and former head writer of Comedy Central's "The Daily Show With Jon Stewart," used her brilliant satirical talents to establish Lady Parts Justice League with other comedians, writers and producers. Its main focus is advocating reproductive rights in the United States. Its members use humor to destigmatize abortion, as the comedians Alex English, Sydnee Washington, Joyelle Nicole Johnson and Leah Bonnema will do at this event.
