“Three solo exhibitions take over the enormous space at Smack Mellon in DUMBO. Brooklyn-based artists Tamara Gayer, Stephen Sollins, and Heeseop Yoon present new work and site-specific projects that transform the space into a controlled chaos of color and geometry. Gayer covers all 24 windows with vivid vinyl works creating a dreamlike cityscape for her installation The Final Contraction — her take on the mathematics of urban landscapes. For Heeseop Yoon's Still Life #11, Yoon takes to the gallery's outside wall creating a tumult with black masking tape. Stephen Sollins composes large-scale works on paper that he calls Pieccwork, traditional American quilts composed of intricately assembled mailing envelopes. A stroll inside is multi-colored cavern is a great antidote to these greydays.”
